The weather now has a trifle more of the spirit of spring in it than when I last wrote and I will correct my statement as to the death of the peaches for after all it seems we are to have peach pie once more.

I kindly thank the editor for his complimentary remarks concerning those lines of mine which were written during an idle half hour and which I never thought would meet with more than a passing glance and if I can reproduce them from memory I will do so. They were but an expression of appreciation to all the contributors to these columns.

I must not neglect saying a few words to Solomon and consoling him in the loss of that marvelous horse which seems to have had a few spare ribs to spare.

CAUGHT COLD WHILE HUNTING A BURGLAR.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have the rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be forever ruined; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Auctioneer, N. WELCH,

OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

BY BLUEBELLS

Where Fleetwood eulogizes Nature,
And hamlets set in groves of green;
Where Jane's droll fun and Pinkney items,
And Sapphire's sparkling news are seen;
Where Violet lends her modest presence,
And both the Pansies vie for room;

Where Touchmenot, the public's idol,
Sends forth her thoughts like rare perfume;
Here too, Geneva wins her laurels,
By giving in a pleasing way,

The news from round about her village,
We hope that she has come to stay;
Hail, Stranger, set yourself at ease, pray!

Aunt Susan, here's a nook for you;
And last, but by no means the least,
St. Joe's White Rose, we greet you too,

All these, and many more, I find,
In this dear old Democrat o' mine.

Jane Mad

Does not Like the Charge of Ned
And Ted--Gives Lots of News.

Pinkney.

JANE.

Well as I find out that it makes Ted die and Neddie mad for people to find out about them being old maids and of course if your shoes fit you can always wear them. Now I am not going to bring up any thing that's happened 5 or 6 months ago as you all did. And as far as a young lady capturing the widower that happened about three years ago. I am sure you all would be glad to get the chance to capture a widower there are more left you all need not be pestering yourselves about that one being captured any more. You spoke about some one being over here taking a course of matrimony. There is no such pupil here. I think you surely must have been taking the degree too, from the way you write I'm sorry you have not succeeded. Now Teddie & Neddie if you think you can smoke this piece in your cob pipes go to smoking it.

Romance

Of the Beautiful Paleface Maiden
And Indian Chieftain, Related, by Fleetwood.

Home again! Home again, after chasing the elusive phantoms to the gulf streams of disappointment. Becoming interested in the surrounding country where I was located I began to inquire in to the origin of the names of some of the streams, Piney, Granddaddy, Peter Cave, and Red Patch, and my enquiries brought out a romance concerning Granddaddy creek.

In about the year of 1749 there came a Hermit and took his abode in a large cave on the head of a small stream in the North-western part of what is now Lawrence County. No one knew from whence he came. The country at that time was full of wild animals, and Indians with whom the old man was friendly. He made frequent trips, always going northward, remaining for two or three weeks and always brought back supplies and ammunition for his faithful old rifle, and about twice or three times a year he would make a trip in a westerly direction to dispose of his furs. There was at that time a trading post on the banks of the Tennessee River about where the town of Clifton stands. On one of the old mans mysterious trips North he brought him a delicate young girl whose name was never revealed, but always in addressing her in his Scottish brogue he always called himself Granddaddy to whom he said one day at some distant day this lovely stream will be called Granddaddy creek. But one Autumn day while the old man was gone to procure supplies a young Indian Chief by the name of White Eagle came to the cave with a band of his treacherous warriors and stole the girl and told her they were going in pursuit of a big lot of gold towards the setting sun. And when the old man returned and found what had happened he swore vengeance against the brutal tribe, that was at that time moving westward. Leaving his traps and everything except his trusty flint lock rifle he went in pursuit of the Red Skins who stole his wild flower who was his only companion in the cave. The cave stands today near the Kelso farm, and along the valleys of the stream once inhabited by the brutal Indians is now to be seen beautiful farms and orchards. There may have been many valuables hid in the old cave, no doubt the bones of the old man has decayed in some wild wood, and the descendants of the blue eyed girl and the dusky Chief are holding prominent places on the Western plains. How many of the natives of that section know that that cave is one of the most historic places in this country. We are sorry that we cannot trace this narrative to a happy wedding, but we leave it to the imagination of the reader to do the rest. Granddaddy is a small creek that winds its way to the waters of Knob through some fine scenery, broad fertile valleys with here and there a rugged bluff covered with evergreens and wild flowers which will ever stand as a monument to the memory of the old huntsman and his fair charge. So the stream will ere be called Granddaddy, so long as I remain Fleetwood.
